The schr Mexico, of and from Salem for New-York, cargo coffee, palm oil, gum copal, machinery, &c. struck on the bar off Nantucket harbor, at 5 P. M. 6th inst. in the strong N W gale, and bilged. The principal part of the gum copal, about two-thirds of the palm oil, some few casks of vitriol, a considerable part of the heavy machinery, the sails, running rigging, cables and anchors have been saved and stored. Her cargo was valued at about $30,000. The machinery alone was worth $20,000. A surveyor had ordered an immediate sale of the wreck and contents on the 10th inst. It is farther stated that there is but little prospect of saving much more of the cargo than may remain in the bottom, to be fished up when the weather moderates. The coffee and ginger root were so saturated with vitriol that they were notthought worthsaving. Capt Webber was attempting to make a harbor at N, and set his colors for a pilot, but owing to a haze upon the water, his signal was not seen. On the 8th it blew a gale from the NW, the upper works separated from the bottom, and her mainmast was carried a way.
